

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

PREFACE.

THE political exigencies of Henry VIII's breach with the Pope caused him to suppress the English monastic houses, with the twofold end of crushing that part of the body spiritual which was the strongest bulwark of papal power in England, and of obtaining lands to grant to the nobility, so that he might secure their favour and support. Begun in 1535 under the pretext of suppressing some of the lesser houses on account of their corruption, this policy of sacrilege went on until every religious house was gone, and in 1545 it was extended to colleges, chantries and free chapels, although it seems that the seizure of the plate and ornaments of these latter did not take place until early in the reign of Edward VI. It is easy to see that this work of sacrilege and confiscation was not likely to stop short of the parish churches, and it began to be extended to them at the very beginning of the reign of Edward VI. Enquiries as to the goods of parish churches were made of the bishops in 1547, and early in 1549 a commission for making inventories was issued to sheriffs and justices of the peace. On 3rd March, 1551, it was ordered by the Privy Council "that for as muche as the Kinge's Majestie had neede presently of a masse of mooney, therfore Commissions shulde be addressed into all shires of Englande to take into the Kinges handes suche church plate as remaineth, to be employed unto his hignes use."¹ This however was not done immediately. On 29th January, 1552, a letter was addressed to each custos rotulorum requiring the delivery of the inventories which had been made under the commissions of 1549. A commission to make new inventories and stop all private embezzlement was issued on 16th May, 1552,² and it was under this commission that most of the inventories now at the Public Record Office were taken, including those printed in the earlier part of the present volume. A new commission was issued on 16th January, 1553, directing the seizure of all then remaining valuables, only the barest necessaries being left for the use of each church.¹ The result of this was that the plate was sent to the Jewel House in the Tower of London and melted down, the vestments and the inferior metal work were sold locally, the linen given to the poor. Thus the sacrilege was complete. The lead and bells do not seem to have been actually taken.²

A necessary accompaniment of this wholesale seizure of ecclesiastical property was of course the taking of careful inventories of it. A great number of these still remain, ranging in date from 1536, when those of the religious houses begin, until 1553—the date of the latest Edwardian returns for parish churches. This great series of 16th century inventories, despite its shameful origin, is of the highest legal, historical and liturgical importance. No other country can show the like. Notwithstanding their obvious value, little more than half the inventories have hitherto been printed, and some of these are in comparatively rare publications which are not easy of access.

Until all such inventories are printed accurately and published in an accessible way, it is impossible to form a just estimate of their contents, or to write a detailed history of the spoliation of our churches by Henry VIII and Edward VI, or indeed to deal properly with the subject of church furniture and ornaments in the 16th century in England as a whole. This the Alcuin Club intends to do as soon as it is practicable, but it is obviously impossible while half the material is lying scattered in MS. at the Record Office. The Committee therefore is first addressing itself to the work of getting all the material transcribed, and printed in an accessible form. In some cases it is hoped that the inventories may be printed by local archaeological societies: where nothing else is possible the club will endeavour to do it, but from the expensive character of the work it is doubtful how much will be able to be done unless financial help comes in from outside.

¹This commission has often been printed: see Seventh Report of the Deputy Keeper of the Public Records, London, 1846, Appendix II., p. 307, or Surtees Society vol. 97, p. 4, or Book of Common Prayer with notes by A. J. Stephens, London 1849, vol. i., p. 356, or Church Goods in Berkshire, by Walter Money, Oxford, 1879, p. xxxii.

The Edwardian inventories for the county of Bedford were published last year. The present volume contains those for Huntingdonshire. The transcripts have been made by Mr. T. Craib, and collated with the originals by Mrs. S. C. Lomas, who is also responsible for the Introduction.

INTRODUCTION.

THE inventories printed in this volume were taken in the 6th year of King Edward VI (1552) by the commissioners appointed on May 16 of that year. The commission is on the Patent Roll, and has often been printed. It is therefore not necessary to reproduce it here. The commissioners were desired to make a fresh survey and inventory of all the goods and ornaments, including the bells, of the churches, chapels, brotherhoods, guilds and fraternities in their several counties, the reason given being that in spite of former inventories, some parts of the goods and ornaments had been embezzled and removed, and that it was "thought mete to have the very truthe herein justly and duly known, to th' intent the same may be . . . redressed and forthwith reformed." The commissioners were also to make diligent search for all goods embezzled or "aliened," and were to commit to prison "without bail or maynprice" any who refused obedience to their commands. There is no word in the commission itself of confiscating the goods, but with it there was sent down (at any rate into the Eastern counties) an Instruction which was much more explicit, and by virtue of which the commissioners summarily swept away everything except a chalice and paten, a meagre supply of surplices for the minister and certain cloths "for the table of Communion."

The Instruction sent into Huntingdonshire is not now discoverable, but that for Northamptonshire "under the King's hand" was shown to Fuller by Thomas Tresham of Geddington, and is printed in his Church History (Book vii, section 2). As it has an important bearing on the matter in hand, we give it here. It is dated June, 1552, and addressed to the Marquis of Northampton and the rest of the commissioners for the county.¹

¹There is also a copy (for co. Nottingham) in the possession of the Duke of Rutland; calendered, but not printed, in the 1st volume of the Hist. MSS. Commissioners' Report on the Welbeck MSS., page 57.

“First, upon the receipt of the same Commission by any one of the same Commissioners, he that so shall first receive the Commission shall forthwith, with all convenient speed, give knowledge to the rest named in the same Commission, and with them shall agree to meet and assemble with that speed they can for the execution of the same Commission and these instructions. And if any of the said Commissioners shall be dead, sick, or otherwise be so absent out of the Countrey for the service of the King, that he cannot with speed attend the same, in that case, the rest of the same Commissioners so that they be to the number appointed by the Commission, shall not make any delay from the proceeding in the same Commission, but shall forthwith allot their sittings, assemblies and meetings for the same Commission, as in like cases hath been, or shall be meet to be used.

“Item, for their better and more certain proceeding, the said Commissioners shall in such cases, where none of the Commissioners be Custos Rotulorum of that County, ne hath been since the beginning of Our Reign, command the said Custos Rotulorum, or other Deputy, or the Clerk of the Peax of those parts, to bring or send unto them such Books, Registers, and Inventories, as hath heretofore any wise come to their hands, by Indenture, touching the Summes, Numbers and Values of any Goods, Plate, Jewels, Vestments, and Bells, or Ornaments of any Churches Chappels, and such like. And likewise the said Commissioners shall send to the Bishops of every Diocese wherein the said County is situate, or to their Chancellours, Commissaries, or other Ecclesiasticall Officers in whose hands, or custody, the like of the aforesaid Inventories and Registers have command of them, and every of them, They shall receive and take the said Books, Registers, and Inventories. And that done, the said Commssioners shall compare both the same Inventories, (that is to say) as well such as they shall receive and take of the Custos Rotulorum, or their Deputy, or the Clerk of the Peax, as of the Bishops, or other under-officers, and according to the best, richest, and greatest inventories of the said Commissioners shall proceed to make their Survey and enquire. And by the same make the searches of the defaults and wants that shall be found. And generally the same Commissioners shall not onely by the view of the said Registers and Inventories, but also by any other means they can better devise, proceed to the due search and inquisition of the wants and defaults of any part of the said Goods, Plate, Jewels, Vestments, Bells or Ornaments.

“Item. For the more speedy obtaining of the said Registers and Inventories, the said Commissioners shall receive speciall Letters of commandement from our Privie Councell for the deliverie thereof, which Letters the said Commissioners shall deliver as they shall see occasion.

“Item. The said Commissioners shall upon their view, and Survey taken, cause due Inventories to be made by Bills or Books indented, of all manner of Goods, Plate, Jewels, Bells and Ornaments, as yet remaining, or anywise forth coming, and belonging to any Churches, Chappels, Fraternities or Gilds, and the one part of the same Inventories to send and return to Our Privie Councell, and the other to deliver to them in whose hands the said Goods, Plate, Jewels, Bells and Ornaments shall remain to be kept preserved. And they shall also give good charge and order that the same goods, and every part thereof be at all times forth coming to be answered, leaving neverthesse in every Parish Church or Chappell of common resort, one, two, or more Chalices or Cups, according to the multitude of the people in every such Church or Chappell, and also such other ornaments as by their discretion shall seem requisite for the Divine Service in every such place for the time.

“And, because We be informed, that in many places great quantities of the said Plate, Jewels, Bells, and Ornaments be imbecilled by certain private men, contrary to Our express commandements in that behalf; The said Commissioners shall substantially and justly enquire and attain the knowledge thereof; by whose default the same is, and hath been, and in whose hands any part of the same is come. And in that point the said Commissioners shall have good regard, that they attain to certain names, and dwelling-places of every person and persons, that hath sold, alienated, imbezilled, taken or carried away, and of such also as have counselled, advised and commanded any part of the said Goods, Plate, Jewels, Bells, Vestments, and Ornaments to be taken or carried away, or otherwise imbezilled. And these things they shall as certainly and duly as they can cause to be searched and understand.

“Upon a full search and enquiry whereof, The said Commissioners, four or three of them shall cause to be called before them, Also the persons by whom any of the said Goods, Plate, Jewels, Bells, Ornamentes, or any other the premisses, have been alienated, embezilled, or taken away, or by whose means or procurement the same, or any part thereof hath been attempted, or to whose hands or use any of the same or any profit for the same hath grown. And by such means as to their discretions shall seem best, cause them to bring into their the said Commissioners hands to Our use the said Plate, Jewels, Bells, and other the premisses so alienated, or the true and just value thereof, certifying unto Our Privie Councell the names of all such as refuse to stand to, or obey their Order touching the redelivery, and restitution of the same, or the just value thereof. To the intent that as cause and reason shall require, every man may answer to his doing in this behalf.

“Finally, Our pleasure is, that the said Commissioners in all their doings shall use such sober and discreet manner of proceeding as the effect of this Commission may goe forward with as much quiet and as little occasion of trouble or disquiet of the multitude as may be, using to that end, such wise perswasions in all places of their Sessions as in respect of the place, and disposition of the people may seem to their wisdomes most expedient. Giving also good and substantiall order for the stay of the inordinate and greedy covetousnesse of such disordered people, as have or shall goe about the alienating of any the premisses, So as according to reason and order, such as have, or shall contemptuously offend in this behalf may receive reformation, as for the quality of their doings shall be requisite.”

It will be noted that a certain discretion was given to the commissioners as regards the ornaments to be left in the churches ; but the commissioners in Huntingdonshire did not avail themselves of it, and allowed nothing but the barest necessities.¹

It will also be seen that no immediate orders were given for the disposal of the goods. They were to be deposited in safe hands and await further directions. The destination of the plate and jewels had already been indicated, by an order of the previous year, (see p. iii. above). The order for the actual seizure of the other things was not issued until the beginning of the following year. The only document in this volume relating to this later commission (of March 3, 1552-3) is a detached indenture, dated May 3, 1553, for the parish of Thurning (see p. 43 below).

At the time of taking these inventories there were about 90 parish churches in the county of Huntingdon. The inventories of thirty-six of these are extant (with useless fragments of three more) giving a fair collection of the ornaments of the churches in the central and southern parts of the county; but the lists for the northern parts, and especially for the hundred of Yaxley, are wanting. The inventories are indentures, written on sheets of uniform size, and now bound in a single volume at the Public Record Office and indexed as Exchequer, King's Remembrancer, Church goods $\frac{3}{2.12a}$. Number $\frac{3}{1\frac{1}{2}}$ however is not in the volume, but is a roll, containing part of the commissioners' return to the later part of the directions in their commission, viz: to ascertain what had been of late years sold or stolen from the churches. The result of their enquiries in forty parishes is given, but unfortunately they are mostly from the northern part of the county; so that we know what had been already taken, but not what was then left, while in the other part of the county we know fairly well what was there, but not what had been already lost. In a few cases, however, (e.g. Bluntisham, Somersham and Kimbolton), the lists of goods sold form valuable additions to the inventories. There is one rather curious point about the certificate of sales. The commissioners inquire what has been sold, aliened, etc., since Feb. 15, "in the second year" of the King's reign. They almost certainly refer to the orders of Feb. 15, 1549, which was of course, the third year of the reign.

The inventories are printed in this volume in the order in which the originals are bound up at the Public Record Office, where they do not appear to be arranged in any particular sequence, but the Table of Contents will make reference to them easy. In printing the documents, ordinary contractions have been extended,¹ and capital letters are employed according to modern usage, but the old spelling has been retained.

The commissioners for Huntingdonshire were Sir Robert Tyrwhit knight, Thomas Audeley, Thomas Cotton, William Laurence and Robert Rowley. Richard Servington's name also appears as a commissioner in the preamble to the certificate of goods sold, but he does not sign either it or any of the inventories.

An inspection of their dates shows that the indentures can hardly have been drawn up at the actual time when the commissioners took their "view and survey," for those of places so far apart as Swinehead and Colne—Bythorn and Bluntisham, bear the same date, whilst those of villages quite close together were made on different days. One explanation of this would be that the commissioners did not visit the churches at all, but that the churchwardens brought in their lists and certified them upon oath; but a more probable explanation is that the commissioners made their rounds of inspection first, and that the indentures were drawn up afterwards. This theory is supported by another fact. The inventories (with two exceptions) appear to be in the handwriting of Thos. Audeley, and to have been signed on the spot by him and by Robert Lawrence, and then sent to the other commissioners, whose signatures are in different ink. In the case of the two exceptions, Buckden and Great Staughton, the inventories are in Rowley's handwriting, and his own name is the only one written in the same ink. If the commissioners had already inspected the churches, for which duty a quorum of three or four was required, it would be perfectly in order for one or two of them afterwards to sit in some central place, where the wardens would appear, and the indentures would be made. Another rather curious point is that whereas the indentures are stated to be as between the commissioners and the churchwardens, the copies in official keeping are those signed by the commissioners, not, as might rather have been expected, those signed by the wardens. The Instructions only stipulate for two copies, one to be sent up to the Privy Council and the other left with those persons to whose hands the goods were entrusted. They were really rather certificates than true indentures, and in Huntingdonshire the wardens do not seem to have signed at all.

Besides the series of Inventories and Sales, there are at the Public Record Office a few other documents relating to Huntingdonshire, which have been included in this volume. The indenture of May, 1553, for the parish of Thurning, has been already mentioned. There is also a bill, undated, of moneys lent to the churchwardens at Great Staughton and laid out by them on their church (when the roof fell down and had to be set up again at the cost of above forty pounds), which was probably given to the commissioners of 1552; an acquittance by Sir Richard Cotton for five pounds brought to him by the parishioners of Buckden for two candlesticks of the church plate which they had sold; an account of money, plate, etc., delivered in by Lawrence and Servington in 1555-6, and a note of the broken plate delivered into the jewel-house by the commissioners for the county of Huntingdonshire in 1553.

In their certificate of goods sold, the commissioners state that they have taken a survey of the goods, etc., of the chapels, guilds and fraternities, as well as of the parish churches, but no inventories of these are now extant.

There is, however, a short "account" of Henry Mannoek, (chiefly in relation to live stock) given in during the 5th year of Edw. VI, but containing a list of sales of the second year of the King's reign.

The county of Huntingdon was, at the time which we are considering, a part of the diocese of Lincoln. A quaint old writer tells us that "the multitude of monasteries it contained is a demonstration of the general goodness of the ground, for the monks always seated themselves in the fattest country, and of this they had gotten above the fourth part." Unfortunately, the only inventory of the monasteries which is now extant at the Public Record Office is that of Sawtry (see p. 51 below) taken in May, 28 Henry VIII., i.e. in 1536, when the lesser monasteries were dissolved. Of the ninety parish churches (or thereabouts) in the county, eighteen, or a fifth of the whole, were dedicated to All Saints, and twelve to St. Mary.

These documents give no indication (except in one instance), as to what happened to the bells. They are not mentioned as being "allowed," as the surplices and altar cloths were, and yet in many cases, one at least was left. The late Mr. T. North, in his Church Bells of Northamptonshire (pp. 27, et seq.) states his belief that the loss of bells at this time was small, and imputes their wholesale destruction rather to other and later causes: but that there was a strong feeling against them is shown by a statement of the church-wardens at Shidbrook, in co. Lincoln, that they were moved to sell their bells by "universal talk, and by persons openly preaching against bells, affirming the use of them to be superstitious and abominable." Old Fuller thinks there was a good deal of embezzlement which was not detected, for, as he says, "everyone who had nimmed a church bell did not ring it out for all to hear the sound thereof." There are still remaining in Huntingdonshire several of the bells mentioned in the inventories, although it may be surmised that they would hardly have been allowed to remain if the puritan commissioners had climbed into the belfries and examined the inscriptions.

Graffham Church has three bells, which are believed to be the same that were hanging there three hundred and fifty years ago, when the inventories were made.¹ The treble bell has no inscription; the second is inscribed "Sum Rosa Pulsata Mundi Katerina Vocata"; the 3rd simply "S. Katerina." Abbots Ripton has still three bells, as in the olden times, but two of them are of later date. The treble one, however, was cast before 1418, and is inscribed:—"Non Venit Ad Veniam Qui Nescit Amare Mariam." At Thurning is a pre-Reformation bell (now unhung) with the inscription "Dei genetrix virgo Maria ora pro. . ." Mr. Owen believes that the second bell is pre-Reformation also; in which case these would be the "two great bells" allowed to the parish in 1553 (see p. 43 below).

Other bells known or believed to be pre-Reformation by Mr. Owen and which are therefore included in the following inventories, are:—

Buckden, treble: "Sca. Katerina ora pro nobis."

Bury, 2nd; "Ave Maria."

Ellington, 2nd: "Vox Augustini sonet in aure Dei."

3rd: "Sancta Margarita, ora pro nobis."

Houghton, treble: "Virg bego Egahlc" (possibly meant for "Virgo bega hoc." See Mr. Owen's book, p. 97).

King's Ripton, treble; "Sancte Johannes, ora pro nobis."

3rd; "Sancte Johannes."

Great Staughton, 3rd: "Hac In Conclave Gabriel Nunc Pange Suave."

Stow Longa: "Sancte Petre Ora Pro Nobis."

Winwick, 4th: "S. Kateri[na]."

Wyton, 2nd: "Sum Rosa Pulsata Munde Maria Vocata."

The most usual number of great bells in Huntingdonshire was three or four, but Kimbolton, Brampton and Hartford had five, and Buckden six. Hurst, Needingworth, Upton, Spaldwick, and St. John's, Huntingdon, had only two. Almost every inventory mentions a sanctus or saunce bell, and differentiates it from the handbells or sacring bells (of which most of the churches had two) on the one hand, and from the bells in the steeple on the other. The sanctus bell was usually, in England, in a bell-cot at the east end of the nave. At Great Staughton, bell-cot and bell are still there, the only example left in the county. In the few cases when there was no sanctus bell, one of those in the steeple would probably be made to serve the purpose. At Somersham, we find a sanctus bell but no handbells. This is explained by the note of sales, from which we learn that one had been sold and another stolen. These handbells, when mentioned separately from sacring bells, were probably for use at funerals. The Kimbolton inventory gives only "five belles in the steeple," but the sales show that its sanctus bell and two hand bells had been already disposed of. Buckworth and Spaldwick were very completely equipped, each possessing four bells in the steeple, a sanctus bell, a sacring bell and two hand bells. Ramsey had three great bells, one sanctus bell, one hand-bell, and two sacring bells.

As regards previous sales of bells, we find that the churchwardens at Upwood had sold their "middle bell," that in many churches the "little bells" or handbells had been disposed of, and in one or two cases the sanctus bell. The most curious entry in this connexion is in regard to Yaxley, where the churchwardens declare that one Mr. Connie (or Coume; it is impossible to be quite sure what the five minims mean in a script where the i's are not dotted) "dyd take ij belles out of the churche for my Ladie Elizabethes grace, of the which her grace hath given one to the parish to ryng at annye casualties of fyere."

Before discussing the contents of the lists given in by the churchwardens, it must be premised that these are proofs of what the churches did, but not of what they did not contain. The lists are manifestly incomplete, and no doubt only represent goods which were worth turning into money or giving to the poor. Moreover, as we have already shown, many things had disappeared before the commissioners began their work. Ornaments which had probably fallen into disuse of late years, under puritan clergy and wardens, were sold with the assent of all or at least of a majority of the parishioners, and there are many notices of embezzlement. In some cases it is quite likely that the so-called embezzlement may have meant only the quiet removal, by the Puritan party, of ornaments which they no longer wished to use. In other cases, gifts appear to have been re-claimed by their donors, probably in the hope of thus preserving them for future use. In proof of the incompleteness of the lists, it may be noted, for instance, that at Bluntisham, two cross cloths (i.e. small banners for the processional cross) are mentioned, but no cross on which to hang them; also that the commissioners duly appoint three altar cloths to be retained, while there is no mention in the list of altar cloths at all, or indeed of altar linen of any sort. The absence of the cross is explained by the list of goods previously sold in the parish, amongst which a copper cross is mentioned.

Chalices. Fifteen of the churches in our inventories have one chalice, and fifteen have two. Somersham and Brampton have three each, and Bluntisham and Ellington, four. Kimbolton (in most respects very well provided) has only one, but the note of sales shows that two others had previously been sold. At Yaxley also two had been sold, and several other parishes had either sold one or had one stolen. About thirty of the chalices are said to be silver and the same number "parcel gilt;" a few are "double gilt;" there is no mention of any made of tin or copper. In most cases the patens are mentioned separately.

Candlesticks. The great majority of the churches had the two candlesticks for the altar, conformably to the general rule in old English use. Colne and Ramsey had four each; Bluntisham had had four, but two had been sold. Ramsay had two altars, and so, pretty certainly, had Bluntisham, as there were four chalices there. Probably Colne had two also. Kimbolton (which certainly had at least two altars) had had four candlesticks, but all had been sold; Great Staughton also four, all sold. Somersham had sold two and three had been stolen. Buckden had two, both sold; Upton two, both stolen. The church rule for altar lights was by this time no doubt in very many places set aside, but it is difficult to see how, on dark winter mornings, the service would be conducted without light of some sort. Probably candles were placed in sconces or even at the end of sticks held in the hand. In every case the candlesticks mentioned are of latten, which was a sort of brass.

Censers. Nineteen of the churches had censers ; Holywell had two pairs, and Kimbolton had had a pair, but they had been sold. Bluntisham had a very fine one, of silver, but another, of brass, had been sold. Somersham, Ramsey and St. John's, Huntingdon, have no note of any, either at the church or sold, but there can be no doubt, from their fine lists of ornaments, that they must at one time have possessed them. At Buckden there was a pair, silver gilt, but not weighing nearly so much as that at Bluntisham. Several other lists give no censers, but as we have not the notes of sales and embezzlements, it is impossible to say whether they had lost or had never had them. The material was usually latten, but there are a few silver and one copper one. Two "ships" for incense are also mentioned.

Pyxes (i.e. cases for the reservation of the Sacrament) are mentioned at twelve of the churches, but Colne and Old Weston each possessed two. The general material was latten, but three silver, two copper and two ivory ones are specified, and one of copper gilt. At Kimbolton, Alconbury, Old Weston, Little Gidding and St. Neots, pyxes had been stolen or sold, that at St. Neots for 10*l*, being of silver and gilt, and weighing twenty-three ounces and a half. Of paxes, [tablets offered to be kissed (the kiss of peace) at the Eucharist], only three are mentioned, one of copper, one of silver, and one unspecified ; two more occur in the list of sales at St. Ives.

Holy water stoups are inventoried at ten of the churches, all of latten except one of silver. Ten more occur in the lists of sales. In many churches no doubt an earthenware basin was placed inside the stone niche, or stoup proper.

Chrismatories or oil vessels are mentioned four times, and twice in the sales. Cruets, lamps, basins and ewers occur occasionally. Sepulchres are mentioned in two of the lists, and four more amongst the sales. In these latter lists are also, at All Hallows, Huntingdon, "cases of wood for images," and at Kimbolton, "a loft called St. George's loft."

With vestments and other textile ornaments and furniture the Huntingdonshire churches were well supplied. As a rule, in these lists, the term "vestment" is used for the robes and ornaments of the officiating priest at the celebration of the mass, and therefore does not include the cope, but the word was very loosely employed, and often included much more. Sometimes the alb and amice are mentioned separately, sometimes not. A "suit" usually meant the three sets of one colour worn by the celebrant, deacon and sub-deacon at High Mass, but sometimes it included copes as well. Thus at Kimbolton we find one suit of red, and another of red and white silk, "that is a vestment with deacon and sub-deacon;" at Brampton "one suit of old white damask, that is three copes, with a chasuble, two tunicles, with albs, stoles and phannons," and another suit of red, but with only one cope. At Holywell there was a "whole suit" of blue velvet and another of blue silk. Somersham had a vestment of blue velvet with deacon and sub-deacon, and two others had been sold. Buckden had four complete suits, made of white damask, and of red, blue and green silk respectively; Bluntisham had also four suits, and a fifth had been sold. Leighton Bromswold had "three vestments of red silke with two tunicles of the same colour" which perhaps means two single vestments and a suit, though the tunicles may have been only for clerks. Graffham, Ellington, Brington, Ramsey, and St. John's and St. Bennet's, Huntingdon, had also suits, and probably in many other of the churches the word vestment included the tunicles, etc., for the deacon and sub-deacon.

When we examine the colours and materials of these vestments, the diversity is bewildering. It is impossible to make out any consistent sequence of colours; but the very large number of blue vestments may be noted. Red, as might be expected, heads the list, with 43; but there are 31 blue vestments to 13 green ones, while, as regards copes, the blue outnumber even the red. When we come to the "cross clothes" or small banners, however, the case is different. Of thirty mentioned in these inventories, fifteen are green; that is the green ones equal those of all the other colours put together. The same thing is noticeable in the cross-clothes of Buckinghamshire, Hertfordshire and Bedfordshire.

Besides the ordinary colours, we have the usual assortment of miscellaneous ones—yellow, tawny (perhaps something like the colour we now call old gold), dun, cyprus, etc. ; and of mixtures—chequered, paned or barred (probably pannelled or striped, the first down, the second across), red and white, “black tawny” (meaning perhaps very dark tawny, unless an “and” has been omitted) and “changeable,” which can only mean what was in later days called “shot,” i.e. the warp and woof of different colours. This appears to have been a favourite kind in the old days. Thus at the creation of Prince Henry as Prince of Wales in 1610, the Bishops are said to have worn rochets (sic), and the little sons of noblemen, robes of “changeable silk.”¹ Many of the Huntingdonshire churches seem to have had no white festival vestments at all, and, indeed, the more these inventories are studied the more we are driven to believe that in the village churches there was no very hard or fast line for the colour use, and that probably their newest and handsomest vestments were used on great occasions. Many of the churches had vestments of white fustian or bustian, but these were almost certainly for use in Lent.

Details of the embroidery of the vestments are sometimes given. Thus, at Colne, there was one “set with blue shields full of mullets” (quare, were these the Cromwell arms?) ; at Bluntisham, a cope with spanges of [probably means spangled or dotted over with] lions of gold ;” at Brampton, a “white cope of damask with pottes of gold,” and a red cope “with flowers and squyreles” [squirrels, i.e. ornamental twists] of gold ; at Long Stow, a vestment “of tynsall satten budded with gold,” and at St. Bennet’s, Hunt : , a cope and vestment of blue silk “wrought with birds of gold,” and a hanging embroidered with the sun and moon.

Corporass cloths and their cases (or burses) and cross cloths or banners, are mentioned in more than half the inventories ; banner cloths and lenten veils or veil clothes (i.e. the great lenten veil hung up between the choir and the altar on week days in Lent), in about a dozen of them ; font veils, lectern veils and sepulchre cloths, in three or four ; rood veils and care cloths (i.e. cloths held over bride and bridegroom during the marriage service), in two; and a "housseling cloth for Easter," in one.

As regards materials,¹ baudekin was a rich silk woven with gold, a sort of cloth of gold, as was also tissue; tinsel satin was probably a species of cloth of silver; and kermoyse appears to be cramoisie, a kind of velvet. Damask was a rich patterned silk, taffeta a plain woven silk; and sarcenet or sarsnet a thinner silk, not unlike what now goes by that name. Dornix or dorneck was a coarse description of damask. Most of the satin employed was satin of Bruges ("satin a bridges"), which, having a thread weft, was much cheaper than true or "right" satin, woven entirely of silk. Say was usually a fine milled cloth, but in early times sometimes denoted a silk fabric. Camlet or chaumblat was also a fine woollen material, evidently nearly as expensive as the silk textures with which it was often associated in sumptuary laws, and buckram appears to have been something of the same sort, although there was also a coarse cheap make of this material, used for linings. Crewel was a kind of worsted, and so was stammel, this latter being fine, and usually of a red colour. Cyprus was a material resembling crape (though the word is also used to denote a colour). Fustian was a cotton material woven like velvet, with a cut surface. Bustian seems to have been a similar substance, but that the two terms are not interchangeable is shown by the Bluntisham list on p. 32. It is known that a variety of fustian was sometimes made of wool; perhaps that was what is here called bustian.

An examination of the entries relating to surplices and rochets shows a very large proportion of the latter; eighty-five surplices and forty-six rochets being mentioned in the inventories. Among the rochets we have reckoned the sleeveless surplices. That the rochet used was of the sleeveless kind, and was in fact a sleeveless surplice, may be inferred from entries such as "iiij surplusses without sleeves and ij with sleeves," (Colne) "xj sleaved surplusses and vj rochettes (Ramsey). At Wistow, among the ornaments

"appointed for the Divine service" by the Commissioners was "one rochet for the clarke." The rochet was the vestment ordinarily used by the parish clerk from at least the time of Lyndewoode in the 15th century, almost to our own day.¹ His assistants—who would be called "servers" nowadays—also wore them in ordinary parish churches, as must have been done at Ramsey, though in very large churches they wore albes, and the clerk himself a tunicle also.² At St. Benedict's, Huntingdon, there is the noteworthy entry "ij new frockes, one old frocke, vij longe surplusses, ij shourt surplusses." Now all these are apparently linen vestments of much the same kind: "short surplices are clearly not necessarily rochets (it is needless to add that they are not the modern "cotta") but more probably surplices for boys: and it is almost certain that the rochets are here called "frocks"—a good old English name. "Apparels" do not occur in any of the lists, but that they were usual may be inferred from the fact that in one case (at Kimbolton) an alb is specified as being "without pareres."

Although the word "towel" was often used to describe the fair linen cloths laid on the altar during the celebration of the Eucharist, it does not seem to have been so used here,³ but is employed in its ordinary sense, and probably also for the houselling cloths. Thus at Graffham we find "ij longe towells, ij hand towells," and at Brampton the somewhat blundered entry "ij longe towells, ij to housell with Ester" i.e. two long towels to give communion with at Easter, the only time when the people usually communicated.⁴ At St. Benedict's, Huntingdon, the "ij long flaxen towelles" seem to be the same: we may contrast ¹See The Clerk's Book of 1549, ed. J. Wickham Legg, Henry Bradshaw Society.

²At Woolley we note that they had a single green tunicle, which was probably for the clerk's use at mass.

³Except perhaps in the case of St. Benedict's, Huntingdon: "one diaper towell, one flaxen towell, wrought with silke."

⁴See the 5th demand of the Devon insurgents in 1549. "We will have the sacrament of the altar but at Easter delivered to the people." Strype's Cranmer.

with them the "viiij littell flaxen towelles" which follow. The same appears to be the case at Easton.

The altar linen seems to be always referred to as "altar clothes." Thus, at St. John's, Huntingdon, "one altar clothe of diapur," and at Ramsey "iiij alter clothes of lynnen and on[e ot]her wrought with redde silke at the endes," undoubtedly refer to the linen cloths to place on the altars, and so do the altar cloths mentioned in the other lists. It seems clear that frontals are not called altar cloths in these inventories, but they are referred to under several different designations. Thus "ij altar hanginges of redde and blew satten bridges" at Colne, "ij alter hanginges of redde satten" at Bluntisham, "a hanging for the altar of blewe braunched dammaske" at Woolley, "one clothe to hange before th'altre of silke and lynnen" at Graffham. At Great Staughton we find "ij frontes for the awters." At Long Stow a curious word is used, "iij skirte clothes, ij of greene silke, and ij of say paned redde and yellowe." At St. Benedict's, Huntingdon, another out-of-the-way word is used apparently for the same purpose: "one old hanginge imbrodered with the soone and mon of old silk velvet, ij aprons of velvet, th' one blewe, th' other blacke." Here too we have "one phrynge of red and yeallow bridges satten, ij old painted hanginges." The "aprons," however, may be frontlets, viz., the long, narrow appendages to the under linens which hang along the edges of altars, and which now-a-days are usually misnamed "super-frontals." The "phrynge" appears to have been a very narrow type of frontlet, nearly all fringe, such as one sometimes sees in mediæval pictures of altars. The Kimbolton list shows a great variety of hangings for altars, viz., "ij hanginges of silke for the aulteres, ij pendentes and ij phringes of silke to the same . . . six pendauntes for the alter of clothe, v whitte hanginges of clothe for the aultre, and one redde hanging for the same . . . iij canvas clothes to cover the alteres, one coverlatte . . . one blewe clothe to hange before the highe allter." The last entry and the "hangings" seem to be frontals; the "phringes" appear to be narrow frontlets as described above, but the purpose of the "pendauntes" is not so certain. They may have been frontlets of a broad kind, but it is more likely that they were short and narrow strips of material to hang over the frontal something after the manner of stoles, and such as may be seen in some miniatures. It is hard to distinguish between the "ij canvas clothes to cover the alteres," and the "one coverlatte," as all would seem to have been for the same purpose, viz., to keep the dust off the linen cloths between services, the custom having come in of always leaving them on the altar. Several coverlets are mentioned in these inventories; they had two woollen ones at Hartford; they sold one of tapestry at Somersham, where they also had "an alter covering of green buckram."

The Brampton list shows a curious distinction between frontlets and broad frontlets; and it is quite possible that here the broad frontlets are what we should call frontals. The entry runs "one old frountlett of silke with ij broad frountlettet to hange before the highe alter whereof ij be silke lined with canvas."

The method of reserving the Eucharist in mediæval England was almost universally suspension in a pyx hanging above the high altar. Sometimes this hanging vessel contained a smaller one which could be removed, and in which it would seem probable that the Sacrament was taken to the sick; thus at Ramsey "one p[pyx] of copper and gillt: a littell peace of sillver to putt in the pyx." At Kimbolton "ij pixes the one of iverie, the other of coper" here the ivory one may have actually fitted inside that of copper.

The hanging pyx was usually enveloped in a cloth through the middle of which the cord or chain passed. This cloth was often of linen and had tassels of some kind at the corners; it fell in graceful folds round the pyx, which it effectually veiled. Sometimes there was also a large umbrella-like canopy of silk stretched upon a hoop or a frame, in addition to the loose veil already mentioned, but at other times its place was taken by a small metal crown or crowns, under which the veiled pyx was suspended. In other cases again the silk canopy seems to have been used, but no veil immediately covering the pyx. At Colne we find "one pix of latten with a capie [i.e. canopy] of lawnde, a pyx case of latton and redde saye." Here the first mentioned would seem to be the linen veil, the second some arrangement of canopy, in which perhaps latten crowns formed a part, a red say curtain depending from them. At Kimbolton they had "a canapie for the sacrament of crymson vellvet, ij cannapias nette fasshion of lynnem." The first is here the umbrella-like outer canopy, the second are two linen veils, evidently of drawn threadwork, of the same style as the well-known Hesselton pyx-cloth. At Ramsey, if we carefully examine the inventory, we find the same distinction, ij canapias for the pyx, the one of silke [the oth]er of clothe; another of linen clothe with iiij s[il]ver bedes; an other of satten bridges." The last mentioned is here most probably of the same type as the first two: we note that the "canopy" which has the silver "bedes" or tassels is the one which is made of linen, that is the veil which hung immediately round the pyx. At St. Benedict's Huntingdon we have, besides the "canapie of dornix," "ij laundes," that is pyx clothes or veils made of fine lawn. At Hartford there is the curious entry, "one pyx of [la]tten with a yearde of gr[eene] silk to the same" Here perhaps we have an instance of a green silk pix cloth or veil, a yard square.

The lists of goods sold, etc., which follow the Inventories, (pp. 31 et seq.) enable us to form a fair general idea of what was done with the money thus obtained. These sales by the churchwardens stand on a different footing from those made later by order of the commissioners. It would appear that nothing was alienated without the consent of "the most part" of the parishioners, and in the great majority of cases, the whole parish had agreed to the sale. In many instances, it is probable that poverty was the motive power, for far the greater part of the money was used for needful repairs to the fabric of the churches or was given to the poor. In a few cases small sums were spent in "writing scriptures about the church," glazing windows, etc., and in a certain number of parishes, the money, or part of it, was expended in making or repairing the highways and bridges and digging dykes in the fens. There is only one instance (at Catworth Magna) of a sale

“without the consent of the parishioners,” and this was evidently also without the consent of the churchwardens, as they complain that “Robert Goslynn of Saydon” has sold for ten shillings a vestment which was well worth thirty.

Fuller (followed by Froude, in his History) has the following sensational account of what had happened to the ornaments of the church in the earlier years of King Edward's reign: “Lately information was given to the King's Councill, that much costly furniture which was embezzelled might very seasonably (such the King's present occasions) and profitably be recovered. For private mens halls were hung with altar-cloathes; their tables and beds covered with copes, instead of carpets and coverlets. Many drank at their daily meals in chalices; and no wonder if in proportion it came to the share of their horses to be watered in rich coffins of marble. And, as if first laying of hands upon them were sufficient title unto them, seizing on them was generally the price they had payed for them.” But although this may have been true of monastery goods, it is certainly not applicable to those of the parish churches.

At the end of the present volume, Appendix I contains an account given in by Henry Mannock, surveyor of chantry goods, chiefly of live stock, seized into the King's hands in the 5th year of his reign; and Appendix II, an interesting inventory of the church plate, vestments, etc., of the Cistercian Abbey of Sawtry, taken on May 30, 28 Hen: viii, i.e. 1536. (This is printed, with a few slight errors, in Archæologia, vol. 43, pp. 200 et seq.) At the time of its dissolution, this house contained an Abbot [William Aungell], twelve monks and twenty-two servants. Its gross revenue was 199*l.* 11*s.* 8*d.*, and the net income 141*l.* 3*s.* 8*d.* The site of the monastery was granted in the following year to Richard Cromwell.
